

Fernando Carceller – United Kingdom  Supported by SIOPE		The Royal Marsden NHS Foundation Trust Paediatric Oncology Sutton United Kingdom
---	---	--

As regards my experience in Flims, having the opportunity to participate in the Workshop on Methods in Clinical Cancer Research carried at the same time a big honour and a big responsibility. The honour of sharing one week with world-class leaders in their fields, getting top quality lectures and their first-hand input on the research project; as well as the responsibility of delivering an optimal clinical trial.

The Workshop stands out for its high scientific level, but most importantly for the value of all the people involved in it, including faculty members, participants and organizers. My friendly advice to those participants attending future editions of the Workshop would be: work really hard on your protocol, but do not forget to mingle with the rest of the people in the Workshop, to share your experiences and to try to get the wider picture of what is “Clinical Research”.

Personally, I greatly enjoyed participating in the 17th Workshop on Methods in Clinical Cancer Research and would like to thank SIOPE for selecting me as their Ambassador and providing financial support to attend the Workshop.